Good afternoon Jacqui.

Apologies for the late response.

There is already a tried and tested route for short processions on Union Street. The route in question follows the north side of Union Street from St Nicholas churchyard to the Castlegate. This route would appear to have advantages over the route proposed by the NFS, insofar as it does not cross any footways and concludes at an area convenient and safe for dispersal.

I would recommend that if this procession takes place then it should follow this established route rather than the one proposed.
