B-MOVIE: LUST AND SOUND IN WEST-BERLIN 1979-1989

SYNOPSIS

Before the Iron Curtain fell, everything seemed possible in walled-in West Berlin, which became a creative melting pot for subculture and pop culture alike. Right in the midst of it all was Mancunian musician Mark Reeder. Drawn by his love of off-the-wall urban electronic music, this label-maker and military fetishist came to Berlin at the end of seventies. Now, through a lovingly compiled collection of visual and audio material – with a soundtrack featuring the likes of legendary bands Westbam, Malaria!, Einstürzende Neubauten and more – he returns to that frenzied but creative decade in a city where the days were short and the nights were endless.
